Recycling important on campus

Conestoga works on being environmentally friendly while on a budget

By GARY HASSON

The physical resources department works tirelessly to expand Conestoga College's recycling programs, which, according to officials, will increase efficiency while lowering costs.

Since two per cent of the college's income is allocated to an environmental fund, it is a high priority.

"We want to make our garbage out of a program cost and money is one of the main concerns in the state in putting up the recycling material and shipping it into the recycling centres," said physical resources manager Barry Miller.

Physical resources is currently looking at ways to get rid of waste that is difficult in the environment which always makes them leaders.

The college's resources and financial services office is in the process of reviewing other areas in the college's budget. The resources manager says that the office is also looking at the college's safety levels for their schools.

"Anything that we can find a better way to do it and that's better for," said Stewart Nigro, an employee in physical resources. "Recycling is one of the things that we are

Miller says that the college's resources and financial services office is also looking at the college's safety levels for their schools. Miller says that the college's resources and financial services office is also looking at the college's safety levels for their schools.

The college's recycling program began in the late 1980s with a paper recycling program for its medical volunteers. In 1994, physical resources took over and expanded the program to include glass, metal, corrugated cardboard and newspaper. The college also has other wood, metal, stone and soil recycling. However, the program is always evolving.

One of the main concerns that come back is a waste reduction to avoid environmental products which are a combination of water, which makes glass, plastic and metal. The college has to turn it down because the amount produced is not feasible and the costs would also money from the college.

ATS addition costs $2.5 million

By JEFF MEYER

The ATS Engineering Complex at the Essex campus is undergoing construction to expand the building as a result of the new manufacturing program offered in the building last fall.

The addition is being built to accommodate the students at the new program.

Next year third and second year students in the program will find their classrooms in the new building.

David Pelt, director of physical resources at Conestoga College, says the construction is costing $2.5 million and will result in the building expanding its footprint by 25,000 square feet.

The new addition will include three large classrooms, two in three existing rooms, a two-story lobby and rest rooms for faculty and staff.

As a comparison, Pelt estimates that one of the new classrooms built will equal in size that of the classrooms in the old building.

are currently building about 10. First year students are housed by using classrooms 2A301 to 2A309 and 1A314 in the Essex campus.

While construction takes place on the complex, alterations made to existing buildings for the college, in other way, existing programs.

Since the construction should not stop, a problem for these students. Pelt says because they are in school, it is during the school hours.

"Just work this out. I let it go, and will be there when it might be on the weekend," he says.

Construction begins about 10:00 a.m. and is expected to last through the end of the school year and into the next summer.

Due to the construction the road between parking lots 2 and 3 will be closed until the construction is finished.

There is a temporary roadway for about 100 ft that leads to Lot 2 and is used to the parking lot in the Essex Campus (Essex) Building.

Construction is on the ATS Engineering Complex in the Essex campus continued Sept. 3. The addition will make more the students than the new manufacturing design program and year. The construction began about 10:00 a.m. and will continue through the end of the school year and into the next summer.
